Valentia is in South West Kerry, next parish America. In the last century it was very different from other west coast islands because it had three major industries: fishing, slate quarrying and communications. These blended to form a unique social mix. As well as farmers and fishermen, the island had quarrymen, engineers, cable technicians, radio officers, meteorological staff, and a resident landlord, the Knight of Kerry. Valentia, a Different Irish Island is an account of their lives.
